Join us to learn more about public health, preventive medicine, and how to incorporate them into your future career as a physician. The panelists are:

Dr. Bob Carr MD, MPH, FACPM

Dr. Carr is the President-Elect of the American College of Preventive Medicine and an Associate Professor of Health Systems Administration at Georgetown University. He was most recently the Senior Vice President & Corporate Medical Director at GlaxoSmithKline and retired in 2014 after a career spanning 25 years. At GSK, he provided strategic direction and leadership in all areas of employee health and performance, heading a global professional team covering 24 international sites. His primary focus was to advance the health and sustainable performance of a workforce of over 100,000 employees who generated annual revenues of almost $40 billion in 2013. Prior to GSK, Bob worked in the US Air Force in the Surgeon General Office of Disease Surveillance & Health Promotion.

Dr. Catherine Witkop MD, MPH

Col Catherine Takacs Witkop is the Program Director for the Preventive Medicine Residency at the Uniformed Services University of the Health Sciences in Bethesda, MD, where she is also an Associate Professor in Preventive Medicine and Biostatistics and Obstetrics/Gynecology. Dr. Witkop previously served as the US Air Force's Chief of Preventive Medicine, advising the Surgeon General on preventive medicine issues. She graduated from Yale University with a BS in Biology before entering the Air Force under the Health Professions Scholarship Program (HPSP). She earned her MD at Columbia University College of Physicians and Surgeons and completed her residency in Ob/Gyn at Travis AFB, CA. After serving as a staff Ob/Gyn, she completed an MPH and a residency in Preventive Medicine at Johns Hopkins Bloomberg School of Public Health in 2008.

Dr. Edward Kalpas MD, MPH

Currently, Dr. Kalpas is a preventive medicine resident at Stony Brook University. He has a bachelor's degree in chemistry from Dartmouth College, a medical degree from the Uniformed Services University of the Health Sciences, and a master of public health degree from Columbia University. He completed a general surgery internship at Tripler Army Medical Center in Honolulu, HI. He founded a non-profit called A Chance For Every Child, has worked for an outcomes and health economics research consulting company and teaches USMLE Step 2 CS preparation courses. His professional interests include medical education, bioinformatics, quality improvement, public health genomics, precision medicine, bioethics, health economics, medical communication and interpersonal skills, international health, and integrative medicine.
