Effective Communication: Encouraging a Postpartum

Reproductive Life Plan for Hispanic Women

Active listening: It only takes about 150 seconds for a patient to describe her concerns, but on average, physicians interrupt their patients about 23 seconds after they begin speaking. Always LISTEN to your patient without interrupting them!

Patient-centered interviewing: Take your time to establish a level of comfort and trust when discussing birth control options with your patient. Ask her which option she feels would be best for her, and have an exchange of discussion on the options which are most feasible and effective. Shared decision making: Respect your patient's culture and beliefs, and ensure that your advice is in line with your patient's choices as well. Remember to always check for understanding by asking your patient to repeat what you have said in her own words, especially in patients with limited English proficiency.
